

OFFICIAL WAR FILMS OF FRENCH NATION TO BE SHOWN HERE

Taken for National Archives, Will Be Displayed in This Country by The World.

Thousands of Americans are already learning how they will go to Europe as soon as the war is over that they may visit the historic battle scenes and view the havoc that has been wrought. But the French official war films, which are to be shown throughout the United States, under the auspices of The World, will give far more than will be seen by even the best of the fortunate tourists.

For these official motion pictures will take one to the famous battlefields, and in the safety and silence of the auditorium the spectators will see just what they would have seen had they occupied the thrilling but dangerous post of an observer at the front. They will see exactly how the men fight in the greatest of all wars.

This is the first time in history that the public far away from the fighting may have war as it really is reproduced before them and get a real glimpse of the human side of the terrible struggle.

These official war films were taken by order of the French General Staff for the purpose of historical record.
They are to be preserved in the national archives of France that future generations for all time may be able to see and judge what the war was like. They form an unimpeachable record. They were taken with the greatest object by men who with the greatest gallantry risked their lives that the truth of these battles might be seen by all and live forever.

H. Alexander Powell, who, as its correspondent, secured for The World from the French Government authorization to present these official French films to American audiences, says they show as nothing else could how modern warfare runs its daily course of give and take.

As soon as arrangements are completed announcement will be made of the date when the pictures will be first shown and the place where they will be exhibited.
